Massachusetts Political Website Hits 250,000 Page Views Aggregator provides comprehensive, up-to-the-minute state political news

(Cambridge) – Two Massachusetts political veterans have joined forces to create a new website for all the state’s political news and it’s as hot as the latest news cycle. MASSCAPITOLNEWS.com—a favorite of legislators, lobbyists, media members and the politically astute—last week reached 250,000 page views in just three months of operation.

David Mattei of Cambridge and Patrick Scully of Everett created the website with the intent of providing one place on the web for Massachusetts political news. It’s growing exponentially, beyond expectations.

“We knew there was a place in the market for this site,” Mattei said.

“Massachusetts is a hotbed for political activity and rather than hunt all over the state for political news, we have it all on MASSCAPITOLNEWS.com. It’s curated by political experts so readers know they are getting everything they want and nothing they don’t,” he said.

Added Scully, “The difference between our site and email newsletters or even newspaper sites is that we update constantly—all day, all weekend, even holidays. That’s why our readers check back two, three, four or more times a day. The news doesn’t wait until the next morning and neither does MASSCAPITOLNEWS.com”

Both editors have extensive political backgrounds. Mattei is a former campaign manager for state Rep. Mike Connolly (MA), aide to Cambridge City Councillor Dennis Carlone (MA), and finance director for attorney general candidate Chris Mattei (CT).

Scully is the founder of Scully Communications, a TV & radio political analyst and journalist, former communications director for the state Senate Democrats in the Connecticut General Assembly, public relations principal at Sullivan & LeShane, and has run a number of campaign communications operations including the historic campaign of now-New Haven, Conn. Mayor Toni Harp.

Mattei and Scully have also now launched the MASSCAPITOLNEWS.com Podcast with a beautiful studio in Cambridge. The show will feature candidates for this year's election cycle as well as advocacy groups and other political experts. Stay tuned for more on this.

Mattei and Scully are available for interviews on the very latest in Massachusetts political news as the election season heats up.
